ABOUT US

The National Information Standards Organization (NISO), a non-profit association accredited by the American National Standards Institute (ANSI), identifies, develops, maintains, and publishes technical standards to manage information in today’s continually changing digital environment. NISO standards, recommended practices, technical reports, and white papers apply to both traditional and new technologies and to information across its whole life cycle, from creation through documentation, use, repurposing, storage, and preservation.

LIBRARY STANDARDS ALLIANCE (LSA) MEMBERSHIP

NISO welcomes academic, public, special, and government libraries and library associations worldwide that have an active interest in collaborating on information standards.
CREATE STANDARDS THAT IMPACT TECHNOLOGY

NISO fosters the development and maintenance of standards that facilitate the creation, persistent management, and effective interchange of information so that it can be trusted for use in research and learning. NISO brings together libraries, system providers, publishers, information aggregators, and other organizations that support learning, research, and scholarship through the creation, organization, management, and curation of knowledge. NISO engages with intersecting communities of interest and across the entire lifecycle of an international standard.

NISO keeps members up to date on national and international library and publishing standards activities as well as related industry standards and resources. The organization offers opportunities to engage in dialogue and discussions about standards, and educational events at which members can learn more about standards implementation and new and emerging technology.

LSA members can participate as a group in NISO’s live educational webinars, which bring fresh technical topics and real-time discussion directly to staff. Access to the webinar archive enables individuals and groups to watch the material whenever it is convenient for them—no plane ticket or hotel required.

Working with other dedicated organizations to develop real-world solutions through community consensus standards is a lasting benefit of NISO membership.
